Genoa, August 1.

OUR last Advices from Sicily, which are of the 8th past, say the Imperial Army was preparing to move towards Catania, for subsisting with the greater Convenience, and streightening the Enemy the more. General Mercy was removed to Reggio, having had an Apoplectick Fit, and was so very ill that his Life was despaired of. Count Gallas, the Viceroy, was also much out of Order at the Departure of the last Letters from Naples of the 21st past, and they were apprehensive he was in Danger. By a Felucca just now come in from Leghorne we have an Account, that an Express had passed by Florence with Advice that Count Gallas was dead.
